A note about the high school lists:

You will find that there are not very many Newbery Award winners listed for high school. Keeping in mind that this list does not include the Honor books at all, my personal suggestion is to go back to the previous grade lists and find books that your student hasn't read from those.

You can delve into deep literary topics with simple books, or use the easier books to examine style and topics of grammar. Big kids will enjoy these books too!

Feel free to rearrange the high school books a bit if it suits you. Generally speaking, if it's suitable in high school it can be applied at any point during those years. You may want to rearrange some depending on your history studies, etc.

I hope you've enjoyed this freebie!

I'm a book list scavenger, and moreso a book hoarder, so I'm always on the lookout for the best read for my kiddos. I'm so jealous of them, getting to read all this good literature throughout their childhood!

If you enjoyed this list, you'll enjoy my blog! It looks new - and it is - but it's a reboot of the blog I had up and running before my health got the best of me for a few years. My plan is to post often about our reading, including my personal reading, and to share my experiences as a homeschool veteran.

One follow-up to watch for on my blog is this list expanded to include all of the Newbery Honor books as well! You should see the massive spreadhseet I have, and it's only one of about a dozen book spreadsheets on my google account....

My homeschool blog also includes topics like living frugally (because most homeschoolers are one-income households), time management, planners and planning, organization, home keeping, reviews of curricula and books, plus so much more!

I'd truly be honored to have you join me.

If you're interested in health topics, you'll also want to check out my main domain page. I'm expanding into several subdomains and would value your relationship as it grows and morphs however the Lord would lead!

God bless you on your homeschooling journey, friend!
